TAC's Ninth Air Force

By MAJ. GEN. E. J. TIMBERLAKE, USAF
Commander

AN account of the Ninth Air Force must concentrate on the tremendous expansion of the command in the four years it has been stationed at Pope Air Force Base, Ft. Bragg, N. C., and on the variety of the activities which it has been called upon to perform.

Its status as the only tactical air force in the zone of the interior has placed heavy demands on its joint air-ground capabilities at the same time it was undergoing a considerable growth in bases and units.

Maj. Gen. Timberlake

In the four year period, a total of 14 bases have been assigned to the command. Six of them are assigned at the present time and another five bases, on which tactical units will be stationed, are programmed for activation within the next three years. The bases are scattered from coast to coast along the southern half of the United States. In addition to these bases, the command has many units as tenants on bases assigned to other commands.

During the same period, some 42 units have been assigned to the Ninth from other commands. Included among those units were eight fighter-bomber wings with subordinate units, three tactical reconnaissance wings, and five tactical control groups. Additionally, the Ninth has

Family Housing Plan Wins Senate Approval; Will Replace 14,000 Substandard Quarters

New and improved housing for almost 14,000 military families moved a step nearer reality this week as the Senate approved the Military Housing Bill.

The $175 million plan calls for replacement of substandard family quarters at hundreds of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps bases, and for rehabilitation of other quarters.

As passed by the Senate, the measure (HR 9924) differs slightly from the version approved earlier by the House. The bill was returned to the lower chamber where the Senate action either will be endorsed or referred to conference.

Observers on Capitol Hill see no obstacles which would delay early enactment of the measure. Funds to build the new homes already have been approved in supplemental Defense Department appropriations.

In reporting the measure to the floor, the Senate Armed Services Committee noted, "Over the past four years only 807 units of family housing have been built in the United States with appropriated funds. The failure to provide adequate housing for military personnel has probably been one of the contributing causes of a reduction in reenlistment rates, with consequential loss of trained personnel and expense of training replacements."

The Committee reported a present net deficit of "at least 150,000 units" of family housing for military families. The Services require a total of 455,000 units for a peacetime force of 1,750,000 men, the report states, but there are available only 37,000 permanent public quarters, 25,000 temporary public quarters in satisfactory condition and 87,000 Wherry units that are completed or in process of completion.

Army and National Guard Prepare Plans To Give Guardsmen Army Basic Training

The Department of the Army and the National Guard are now working out a plan which will permit National Guard recruits to take a voluntary, eight-week course of full-time basic training with the Army.

The move is being made to speed up the progress of National Guard recruits toward training as specialists, according to Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, Chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Enrollment will be made in the same manner as National Guardsmen who can now take some 200 specialized Army School System courses which run from three weeks to nine months.

USCOA IS AMENDED

The Uniformed Services Contingency Act was amended this week by Senate passage of a bill which permits retired military personnel to revoke elections made under the act if the election resulted from mathematical error or misinformation.

The plan now goes to the White House for approval.

The Army will be entitled to full military pay.

It is expected that the majority of National Guardsmen applying for Army basic training will be high school or college students who would attend during the summer months.

General Erickson has asked the Adjutants General of the States and Territories to determine the approximate number of Guardsmen who would be likely to take the training between 1 Jan. 1955 and 30 June 1956. If attendance requests are sufficient, the program will be a continuous one.

The Air National Guard has already established such a program. Air National Guardsmen may apply for an 11-week basic training course with the Air Force.

Insurance for Reserves

Reserve officers of all Services would receive $10,000 free insurance under a bill passed by the Senate this week and sent to the White House for final approval.

The measure applies to those on active duty for 14 days or more.

Senate Group Asks Ammunition Review

All four of the military Services garnered some criticism this week when a Senate Subcommittee issued a report calling for a reappraisal of the Nation's ammunition requirements.

The group, headed by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Maine) recommended "a critical review" of ammunition planning at the Pentagon, particularly as it relates to the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

OK NAVY MSC CHIEF

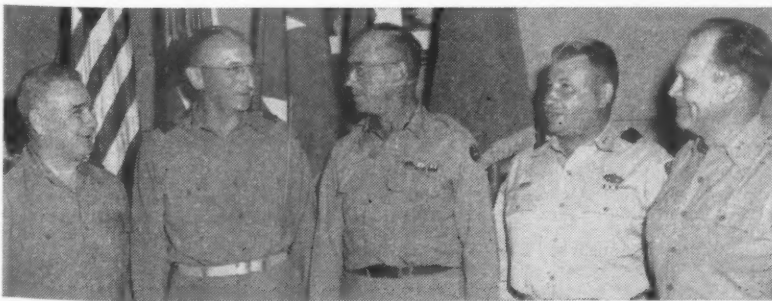

Creation of a Chief of the Navy's Medical Supply Corps was authorized this week in legislation approved by the Senate.

The bill (HR 2224) provides also for the promotion of the new MSC Chief to the rank of Captain.

The Navy currently is authorized 17 MSC captains but none have become eligible for promotion.

RADM. H. L. Pugh, Surgeon General of the Navy, has said creation of the MSC Chief will "improve the administrative efficiency of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and provide an additional incentive for a career in the MSC."

He told the House Armed Services Committee when the measure was under consideration there, that the expanded functions of the Medical Service Corps and its present strength of over 900 "requires an officer with the prestige and authority of higher rank."

Air Med. School Gets "Sealed Cabin" To Study Pilots' Needs in Space Ships

The first piece of experimental equipment ever built specifically for the study of living conditions in space has just been delivered to the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex.

Known as a "sealed cabin," it was designed to investigate human factors inside cramped quarters of a space ship, flying far outside the useful limits of the earth's atmosphere.

Except that it doesn't fly, the cabin will give aeromedical researchers at the Randolph Field institution most of the sensations they would experience on a flight of several hours or days in space.

The sealed cabin is a joint project of the School's departments of Physiology and Space Medicine. It is under the immediate supervision of Dr. Hans-Georg Clamann, an authority on the body's functions at very high altitudes.

It is a first cousin of the low-pressure chambers in which aeromedical specialists for some years have studied human reactions to the thin air in the stratosphere and beyond it.

But low-pressure chambers—or altitude chambers, as they are sometimes called—reproduce conditions in the air outside the craft. The sealed cabin, on the other hand, tells him what goes on inside the craft, where a careful balance of atmospheric conditions must be artificially maintained. As its name implies, the sealed cabin is hermetically closed off from the sky outside.

The reason it is needed is that pressurized cabins of the conventional type cannot be used above 80,000 feet. There is so little air at that height that present-day compressors cannot pump in enough of it to keep the flyer safe from various kinds of altitude sickness.

Besides, the outside air above 80,000 feet contains ozone. Contrary to the popular impression of ozone as a healthful and invigorating element, it is a harmful gas in high concentrations. In medicine it is sometimes used as an antiseptic and a disinfectant.

But in a cabin sealed off from the outside air, as in a tightly shut closet, several uncomfortable things happen. For one, the occupant uses up oxygen at a rate of about 26 quarts an hour. At the same time he exhales carbon dioxide, another unpleasant gas, along with water vapor that raises the humidity. He also produces body heat, which elevates the temperature.

The sealed cabin has to carry enough oxygen to replace what the flyer consumes, and chemicals to remove the excess carbon dioxide and water vapor. It must have refrigerating equipment to control the heat. Since all these protective measures add weight to the craft, Dr. Clamann's object is to find out how little climatization the flyer can safely

Another drawback in a sealed cabin is that the total air pressure cannot be too great, or the stress on the walls will become a structural hazard in the near-vacuum around the craft. So the physiologist and his associates must determine how little pressure the body can take.

It will be some time before the sealed cabin—not yet hooked up in the laboratory—can give him any definite results. Meanwhile, several test pilots in experimental rocket aircraft (among them William B. Bridgeman, Marine Lt. Col. Marion E. Carl, and Air Force Maj. Charles E. Yeager) have already flown for brief intervals in the neighborhood of 80,000 feet.

Tomorrow's rocket ships are edging into the region where the men who fly will have to sit inside a sealed cabin. So Dr. Clamann is working with his odd-looking tank at the School of Aviation Medicine, hoping he will have the answers when they are needed.

REPLACE THREE WORDS WITH 21

A "complicated" Defense Department term has been unscrambled in 21 words by a Senate Subcommittee.

The three-word Defense Department term pertaining, in this instance, to ammunition, is: "Mobilization reserve requirements."

This, the Preparedness Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee states, "is complicated Defense Department terminology."

To clear up the meaning of the phrase, the Subcommittee said, "simply stated" it "means that we must have sufficient ammunition on hand in the event of war to last us until postwar production equals battlefield consumption."

STANDARDS FOR TOP PENTAGON JOBS

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has drawn up a set of five requirements for prospective new members of his civilian team at the Pentagon.

He informed reporters this week that he tells each candidate for one of the posts in the 30-man Secretariat that he:

- 1—Must be honest,
- 2—Must know something about the work he will undertake, and be interested in learning more,
- 3—Must like the work and mustn't think he's sick when he sweats,
- 4—Must be a man of good habits, and
- 5—Must be a damn fool; otherwise he would stay in his present job.

Defense Chief Finds It Difficult To Fill Top Posts; Secretariat Now Numbers 30

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said this week he is not finding it an easy task to fill the new assistant secretary billets recently approved by the Congress.

At present, the Department has 30 top spots in its civilian Secretariat (29 secretaries, deputy, under and assistant secretaries, and the General Counsel of the Department). Seven of the offices currently are vacant, including that of Assistant Defense Secretary for Manpower and Personnel.

Despite the difficulties, however, Mr. Wilson said he is pleased that Congress approved the two additional assistants for each of the military departments.

Both of the new Army assistant secretaries have been nominated and Mr. Wilson said two others (one AF and one Navy) will go to the Hill this week. The Air Force official will be the Assistant Secretary for Research and Development, and the Navy post being filled is that of Assistant Secretary for Financial Management.

THE JOURNAL learned on good authority that Mr. Paul G. Goebel, former Mayor of Grand Rapids, Mich., is being considered for the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy; probably for Personnel. A lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, Mr. Goebel is 53.

Asked at a Pentagon press conference if he is "having any trouble getting people" to take the new posts, Mr. Wilson replied, "I would say that we are. Our sights are pretty high. These are big, important jobs, and it is hard to find a man with experience in the areas in which he will have to operate."

Commenting on a press statement that World War II military forces were directed by a staff of eight top civilians, the Defense Secretary said "the old jobs got more complicated all the time."

He said during WWII it was not so essential to account for expenditures, the main thing was "to win the war." Now, he noted, it is more important for the Departments to eliminate waste and to accomplish as much as possible with available funds.

Also, he said, new atomic weapons, supersonic planes, radar development and the numerous Allies which the United States has throughout the world, have greatly increased the responsibilities of the Department.

To Review Ammo Status

gram, "which involves some risk," Senator Smith said, "coupled with an unforeseen demand for logistical support of our French ally in Indo-China," makes a reappraisal "essential" at this time.

The Subcommittee said it is "disappointed in the accomplishments by the individual MDAP member nations in producing ammunition," and feels "this apparent lack of self-sufficiency justifies a reappraisal of the program with the possible result of producing the ammunition in the United States."

Ammunition for U. S. troops in the Far East and Europe is "sufficient to meet U. S. requirements," the Subcommittee concluded, but "the European production base for ammunition that is being established under MDAP will be of little assistance in the event of an all-out war."

The Subcommittee said the maximum production of the MDAP countries "will equal only 25 per cent of their expenditure rates. Unless the United States is willing to see these countries swallowed up by the Communist aggression, it will be essential to supply them with the necessary ingredients to carry the burden of combat."

The ammunition programs of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps all received some critical mention in the Subcommittee report.

The Air Force, the report states, "is in the weakest position," and "further demands for ammunition" will be created when the 137-wing goal is achieved on 30 June 1957.

The major problem facing the Air Force is the fact that newer, faster, higher-performing aircraft are rendering WW II ammunition "ballistically and operationally unusable." The report states: "The production of higher speed aircraft has made it necessary to develop a 'low drag' bomb which has lower wind resistance characteristics. It is in this field of procuring the newer types and designs of ammunition that has caused the gravest concern on the part of the Air Force officials."

In the case of the Army, the Subcommittee said it has "reservations as to the justification" for a two-year requirement for training ammunition which the Army computed in its needs. "The committee is not clear as to the reasons for projecting this requirement so far in the future," the report said, especially since the Navy requires only a six-months' training allowance.

Inclusion of "six months' wartime usage" in the Navy's peacetime requirements, "is misleading," the Subcommittee said, and "more appropriate terminology should be used to more correctly define what is required for the routine peacetime operations as contrasted with the needs for war."

Marine Corps requirements were reported to "seemingly show a larger deficit than is warranted," and also do "not take into account production which is funded into the future, thus giving no indication of the improvements in the quantity of reserve stocks which will result from future production."

Chamber of Commerce Backs Career Incentives Except Pay and GI Rights

Appointment of a 34-member Committee on National Defense has been announced by Clem D. Johnson, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

This committee, composed of business and professional leaders from all parts of the country, has as its primary objective the provision of adequate national security at a "bearable cost."

Arthur Y. Milam, Senior Partner in the Jacksonville, Fla., law firm of Milam, McIlvaine, Carroll and Wattles, will be the committee chairman for the coming year.

Meanwhile, Representative Dewey Short, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, was urged in a letter from Clarence R. Miles, Manager of the Chamber's Legislative Department, to give "further and early consideration to measures designed to help attract to military service, and hold, the high type of men that are required if we are to maintain forces in being at the required level of efficiency."

However, Mr. Miles declared that in the desire to boost reenlistment rates and reduce annual training costs, "it's possible to lose sight of certain fundamentals."

"For example," Mr. Miles wrote, "it must be recognized that military service simply cannot be made attractive enough to retain the great majority of the men being inducted for two years of service."

"Secondly, many of the so-called objectionable features of service life can only be corrected by the services themselves. Hanson Baldwin, military critic of the New York Times, describes this aspect of the problem thusly: Morale is a function of command—probably its primary function—and there is no doubt that poor leadership is responsible for many of the ills of the services today."

"Thirdly, as Admiral Robert Carney recently stated, morale is not as closely related to the pay envelope as some people think and, in any case, a fighting man's morale should not and must not be dependent upon remuneration. It will be tragic, indeed, if we reach the point where we can obtain capable officers and non-commissioned officers only by offering them so much in the way of pay and other material benefits that they would be tempted to prefer the service to a career in business because of the greater take."

"Fourth, repeated demands for extension of benefits authorized by the GI Bill of Rights to active duty personnel ignore the fact that this law has been and should be, until terminated, a rehabilitation measure."

"Fifth, an unprecedented percentage of our active duty military personnel are family men. Therefore, adequate provision for dependents is of utmost importance."

"The Chamber hopes that the eighty-fourth Congress will take up where the 83d Congress left off and continue to work toward solution of this problem."

In addition to its primary function, the Chamber National Defense Committee will seek realistic planning for industrial mobilization and proper allocation and utilization of manpower resources.

Other members of the committee, in addition to Chairman Milam, are:

THULE MAINTENANCE RECORD

The 53th Air Rescue Squadron at Thule is claiming a new maintenance record for SA-16 amphibians, having flown a squadron aircraft 1021 hours using the same engines and airframes.

During one 10 day period, 58:35 hours were flown on this aircraft while on search for a missing US Navy PB4Y-2. It was often necessary for the maintenance crew to work around the clock to insure that the flight crews would find the aircraft in flyable condition.

Much of the credit is given to S/Sgt. Carl W. Lonnberg, crew chief for the greater part of the record breaking period.

12 Military Bills Head For White House Following Final Congressional Action

Final Congressional action was completed this week on all but a handful of the military bills under consideration by the 83d Congress.

Passed by the Senate and readied for the President's signature were the POW Benefits Bill, the Army JAGC Promotion measure and the Navy's plan to create a Medical Service Corps Chief (see stories elsewhere in this issue).

One measure, the Military Housing Bill, was approved by the Senate and returned to the House for concurrence or conference. Its final approval, however, appears assured according to Capitol Hill sources.

Other bills which the Senate voted to send to the White House:

HR 8041, provides benefits for WAAC service.

HR 4690, provides for erection of markers in national cemeteries to honor military personnel missing in action.

tary personnel missing in action.

HR 7131, provides authority for Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz to take "outside" employment.

HR 8750, authorizes the Navy to dispose of certain uncompleted destroyers and submarines.

HR 9302, provides for revocation of USCOA elections.

HR 9020, provides increase in monthly rates of compensation for certain veterans and their dependents.

HR 5314, extends coverage of the Servicemen's Indemnity Act to ROTC members ordered to active training duty for periods in excess of 14 days.

HR 3712, authorizes the Air University Command to confer appropriate degrees upon graduates of the USAF Institute of Technology.

HR 8034, incorporates the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Senate Approves Korean POW Payments; More Than 8,500 Would Receive Benefits

American personnel who were held as prisoners during the Korean War, and about 3,500 survivors of deceased POWs, will collect $12-million under the terms of a bill approved this week by the Senate.

The measure (HR 9390), passed by the House on 29 July, extends POW benefits under the War Claims Act of 1948 to civilian internees and American prisoners of war captured and held during the hostilities in Korea. It now goes to the White House.

For members and former members of the Armed Forces the payments would amount to $1 per day for each day the claimant was held as a prisoner and on which he did not receive adequate rations. An additional $1.50 would be paid for each such day he was subjected to uncompensated, forced labor or other inhumane treatment.

The Senate Judiciary Committee noted that there are "some 5,000 living former prisoners of war in Korea, and survivors of approximately 3,500 deceased former prisoners of war" who will be benefited by the bill.

"In addition," the report notes, "payments will be available for the benefit of several hundred American prisoners of war who have not yet been released by their Communist captors in the Korean conflict."

AIRBORNE RING CONTEST

The newly organized Airborne Association, Inc., of paratroopers, past and present, is sponsoring a contest to discover a design for an official Airborne ring.

The contest "musts" are kept at a minimum of two: Entrants must be Airborne; and They must meet the inflexible deadline set at 31 Aug.

Artistic ability is not required. Even a rough sketch of the design isn't necessary. A simple explanation of the entrant's idea will suffice.

Entry blanks are available in the orderly rooms of all Airborne units, at Post Exchanges, and at Service Clubs.

All entries must be submitted to the Public Information Office, Building T-41, Michigan Avenue, Ft. Campbell, Ky., before the deadline, Tuesday, 31 Aug.

be eligible to file claims under the bill within one year from the date of their return to the jurisdiction of the United States. Their survivors would have one year from the date of determination of actual or presumptive death is made within which to claim survivor benefits.

SAC's Recon., NAV Tests Underway At Fairchild

Three teams of officials are supervising and compiling scores and arbitrating decisions during the Strategic Air Command's annual Reconnaissance and Navigation Competition which got underway 8 Aug. at Fairchild AFB, Wash., and winds up 15 Aug.

The competition, held each year since 1952, was established to "determine the relative capabilities of reconnaissance wings and crews and to continue the competitive spirit developed within the Strategic Air Command." Participating are 12 crews from SAC's six Strategic Reconnaissance Wings. Each crew flies two missions during which they are required to accomplish a variety of assignments. Close attention is paid by officials to such matters as photo reconnaissance, electronic and weather reconnaissance, and navigation and bombing.

Chairman of the Judging and Arbitration Committee, the meet's high tribunal, is Col. R. D. Reinhold from SAC Headquarters, Omaha, Nebr.

Three additional officers, one from each SAC "numbered" Air Force, make up the balance of Colonel Reinhold's committee. Col. R. T. Robinson, from Barksdale AFB, La., represents the 2d Air Force. Col. W. E. Arnold, March AFB, Calif., and Lt. Col. John Allen, Carswell AFB, Tex., represent the Fifteenth and Eighth Air Forces, respectively. Colonel Arnold is Chief of Staff for the Fifteenth, the host Air Force during the competition.

Heading the scoring committee are six experts from Strategic Air Command Headquarters. Lt. Col. W. O. Brinberry is Chairman. The remainder of the contingent, all from Offutt AFB, are: Maj. C. J. Benedict, Alternate Chairman; Lt. Col. G. T. Hicks, Reconnaissance Technical Advisor; Capt. D. B. Ingram, Advisor; Capt. H. D. Turner, Weather, and one civilian, Mr. W. C. Obba, SAC Operations Analyst.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Col. P. J. Mitchell Picked As Infantry Center CofS

Col. Paul J. Mitchell, USA, has been named Infantry Center chief of staff at Ft. Benning, Ga. He succeeds Col. Herbert J. Vander Heide, who leaves for duty with the First Cavalry Division in Japan.

Colonel Mitchell, Infantry Center G-4, will be replaced by Lt. Col. J. A. Cook, chief of the G-4 Section's Special Project Division.

Before going to Fort Benning in June, 1952, Colonel Mitchell was assistant G-4 at General Headquarters in Tokyo.

He was graduated from George Washington University in 1924, and the U. S. Military Academy at West Point in 1928.

During World War II, he was in Africa with the 5889th Central Postal Directory and in China as a tactical advisor to the China Combat Command.

Lt. Col. Jack A. Requarth has been named The Infantry Center's G-3 (operations and training officer), replacing Col. Gines Perez, who will attend the Army War College.

Colonel Requarth was with the U. S. Army headquarters in Europe at Heidelberg, Germany, from 1950 to August 1953, when he came to Fort Benning to become deputy G-3.

Army Keeps Brown Color For 4 WO Bars

The Army will retain brown as the color of new collar insignia for its four grades of warrant officer, according to a Pentagon spokesman.

Assistant Secretary Hugh M. Milton II is expected to give Army approval within the next few days.

The Army General Staff, which felt that the brown bar would clash with the recently approved Army-Green uniform, had been considering either purple, black, or the new Army-Green. Other colors were precluded from consideration since it was believed complaints would be registered if the entire Army were forced to wear the color of one of its Branches.

As reported in last week's JOURNAL, the Air Force WO bars will be sky-blue; the Navy, Navy-blue; and the Marine Corps, scarlet.

The need for new collar rank insignia for all the Services was made necessary by the passage of the Warrant Officer Bill. The legislation created the grades W-1, W-2, W-3, and W-4, effective 1 Nov.

Following Army approval of the brown bar, the Defense Department will issue a directive ordering the adoption of the new rank designators sometime within the next few weeks, an Army official said.

Except for the background colors, all bars for the four Services will be identical. They will measure 1/4" in length and will be broken by a centered, 5/32" gold stripe for W-1's; two gold stripes for W-2's; a single silver stripe for W-3's; and two silver stripes for W-4's.

Details concerning sleeve and shoulder-board markings for the Navy's four grades of warrant officer appeared in THE JOURNAL of 3 July.

Col. Neely Named To Aviation Post

Col. Robert B. Neely, USA, has assumed the duties of Assistant Chief of Transportation for Army Aviation.

He succeeded Col. William B. Bunker, USA, who has been named Commandant, Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Va.

A 1933 graduate of West Point, Colonel Neely served in the Army's Field Artillery until January 1952. During the Korean War, he commanded an artillery battalion of the Third Infantry Division.

He attended flight school in 1947 and reported to his new post from the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

Col. J. Paul Breden Named Commander of Ft. Myer

Col. J. Paul Breden has been named commander of Ft. Myer, Va., the 70th in line of such illustrious commanders of the post as former Colonels George S. Patton, Charles Summerall (later U. S. Army Chief of Staff) and Guy Henry (later Chief of Cavalry).

The answer is simple: Lycoming builds more types of power plants designed for varied types of helicopters than any other engine manufacturer. Some users are shown above.

Since 1940—when Lycoming powered the pioneering Vought-Sikorsky 300—Lycoming has produced engines ranging from 135 to 1500 horsepower. And they have been designed for horizontal, angular, and vertical mounting.

Look to Lycoming for engines that give dependable performance and long life. For further information, write on your letterhead for Lycoming's free booklet titled "Helicopter Power Plants."

"Helicopter Is Here to Stay," USMC Says; Begins New Training Program for Pilots

For the first time in the history of Marine Aviation, pilots are being trained for helicopter flying only.

Prior to 5 Dec. 1953, when the first special eight-week course began at Pensacola, Fla., all Marine pilots who flew helicopters were also qualified to fly fixed-wing aircraft.

"The new courses," a Marine spokesman explained, "were instituted to meet the growing demands of mobile warfare. The Corps recognizes that the helicopter is here to stay."

Initially, all new pilots receive conventional aircraft training through their basic training period. Future Marine 'copter pilots then begin rotor-blade craft training and fixed-wing flyers take advanced training which is conducted at Pensacola.

Headquarters told THE JOURNAL that helicopter pilots who desire to remain in the Marine Corps and receive Regular commissions will be re-trained in fixed-wing flying after they have completed a tour of rotor-blade duty. Others, insofar as practical, will be retained as helicopter pilots in the Reserve program.

Marine Corps Headquarters also revealed that an additional helicopter training program has been inaugurated which involves pilots in the rank of Captain and above. This program takes pilots experienced in flying conventional aircraft and re-trains them in 'copters. This course is also conducted at Pensacola.

At the present time, non-aviators who wish to enter the Marine Corps helicopter training program are first required to complete the NATC course. Marine Corps commands, however, are accepting applications for entrance into its helicopter training program from experienced Naval Aviators in ranks above 1st lieutenant.

A continuing program, a new helicopter course opens to new students every second week. To date, the Marine Corps has qualified 48 helicopter pilots under the program. Headquarters estimates that approximately 700 such pilots will fill its need.

The Marine Corps realizes a total input of nine students every two weeks. Six enter the program from NATC basic training and three are drawn from the ranks of experienced conventional aircraft pilots. Both categories of students, schooled at the Naval Air Training Command at Pensacola, are trained according to the same syllabus.

Some of those trained serve as pilots and some as co-pilots. Others will later fill billets in squadron and group staffs.

Lt. Col. Blue Commands Red Devils Sq., MAG 13

Lt. Col. Donald B. Blue, USMC, has assumed the duties as Commanding Officer of the "Red Devils" jet squadron of Marine Air Group 13, headquartered at Kaneohe Bay, T. H.

He relieved Lt. Col. Robert R. Burns, USMC, who is slated for duty with Marine aviation in the Far East.

THIS FLYING LABORATORY CARRIES A UNIQUE CARGO

... many of tomorrow's navigation and communications devices now being designed by IT&T for aircraft safety and efficiency.

The interior of the "Flying Laboratory" of Federal Telecommunication Laboratories, a division of IT&T, is a veritable airborne workshop. Here, navigation aids for use at short and very long distances as well as for low approach and landing, and many other experimental radio and electronic devices are put through their paces under "in-service" conditions.

Perhaps most widely-known at this time of all aircraft navigation aids pioneered by IT&T scientists is ILS (Instrument Low Approach System). Radio beams of ground transmitters activate two needle pointers on the plane's indicator. When both are perfectly centered, the pilot knows he is directly in the center of the approach lane, and at the right angle of descent for a perfect landing.

Since the early days of flight, IT&T research has made many contributions to safer, more dependable flying. It began with the world's first instantaneous direction finder. It continued through ILS, air-to-ground radio, VHF airport direction finders, and greatly improved VHF omnidirectional radio range (VOR). Today, Navarho, Navascreen, two-color radar and Moving Target Indicator Radar promise great benefits for aircraft traffic control. And very important is IT&T's newest crystal-controlled distance measuring equipment (DME) which, in combination with VOR, tells the pilot with uncanny accuracy his distance and direction to or from a known ground station. Years of experience in research, and high skill in production are important reasons why better performance is built into products for home, business and industry by the manufacturing divisions of IT&T—a great American trademark.

Some of the latest developments in Air Force aviation will be included in the four-day Air Force portion of the National Aircraft Show, Cox Municipal Airport, Dayton, Ohio, 4, 5 and 6 Sept.

In addition to the 23 mission aerial program, nearly two dozen aircraft will be placed on static display and more than 12 other exhibits will be open to the public.

In addition to the daily program the Air Force will participate in several special events including the Bendix, Allison, Thompson and General Electric Trophy Events.

Included among the latest models which will participate in fly-over demonstrations will be the Lockheed RC-121, radar picket aircraft, RB-57, Martin bomber, B-52 eight-jet long-range Boeing bomber, North American F-100, first USAF fighter to exceed the speed of sound in level flight, and Convair's F-102, delta wing fighter.

Jet assisted take-offs (JATO), afterburner climbs, aerial refueling and the release and retrieve operations, weather permitting, of a Republic F-84F fighter from a Convair B-36 will also be featured.

Lt. Gen. Barcus At NEAC

Lt. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus, new Commander-in-Chief of the United States Northeast Command, has arrived at Torbay Airport to relieve General Charles T. Myers who takes over the post of Commander of the Air Training Command at Scott AFB, Ill.

On hand to greet the General and his wife as they stepped from the aircraft were his staff, a group of officers' wives, and a wall of newsreel and flashbulb cameramen to record the arrival. A mobile unit from Radio Station CJON, St. John's, joined the Special Events staff of VOUS Pepperrell in an on-the-spot interview of the new USNEC Commander.

Gen. Underhill to ARTC

Maj. Gen. Edward H. Underhill, USAF, has been appointed vice commander of the Air Training Command with headquarters at Scott AFB, Ill.

General Underhill succeeds Lt. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus, USAF, who has assumed leadership of the Northeast Command at Pepperrell AFB, St. John's, Newfoundland.

General Underhill will report at Scott about 1 Sept.

SAC LENGTHENS NCO ACADEMIES' COURSE

The Strategic Air Command's four NCO Academies will hereafter operate under a new five and one-half week course length. A new group of 60 students at each of the Second, Eighth and Fifteenth Air Force and 7th Air Division academies will be graduated on 18 Sept.

Extension of the course length by one and one-half weeks and virtually all other proposals submitted to SAC headquarters by conferees at the recent command-wide NCO Academy conference at March AFB, Calif., have received the go-ahead from General Curtis E. LeMay, SAC's commander.

In addition to the previously-announced shoulder loop insignia to be worn by all academy graduates, approval also was given for a small decal to be placed on auto windshields above the SAC crest decal already used throughout the command as a motor vehicle registration tag.

SAC also gave its okay to the addition of three master sergeant instructors to the teaching staff at each academy, and endorsed a three-year minimum tour for all instructors.

Col. King, CO of 525th ADG, Top Scorer In New Castle Wing Rocketry Meet

Col. Benjamin H. King, Commander of the 525th Air Defense Group, scored 2,000 points to become the top scorer in the Air Forces first wing rocketry meet last week, at New Castle County Airport, Wilmington, Dela.

Six teams representing the five squadrons of the 4710th Defense Wing and a winggroup team headed by Wing Commander Col. Milton H. Ashkins, flew their F-94C Starfires and F-86D Sabers in simulated intercepts where actual rockets were fired at targets towed by aircraft of the 2d Tow Target Squadron of Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

Competition ran high with all participants sweating out each mission and rooting for their individual teams. Things went rather slowly the first two days due to a run of bad weather which precluded firing for record. However the second and third day action began with more of the rocket firing craft getting off.

On the fourth day of the meet 2d Lt. Joe Mizelle of the 95th Fighter Interceptor Squadron of Andrews AFB scored 1,000 points on his first mission to take the temporary lead of the meet, but, Colonel King went out and proceeded to blast the entire target into the Atlantic Ocean to put the Wing-Group team back in the running. The afternoon of the same day, Colonel King flew again and scored another 1,000 points to take a very impressive lead. Final tabulations show the Wing-Group team with a total of 2,300.

Trophies for the winning team were presented to the Wing-Group team at ceremonies at the New Castle Officers Club. Individual high scorers' trophies were awarded to outstanding participants at the same time.

Final analysis and general consensus of opinion by all who observed or participated was that a meet similar to this one, should be held quarterly to improve the interceptor techniques and to maintain a high degree of training so necessary to perform the mission of air defense if and when the need arises.

The 46th F.I.S. of Dover AFB, 45th F.I.S. of Langley AFB, Va., 95th F.I.S. of Andrews AFB, Md., 96th and 332d Fighter Interceptor Squadrons of New Castle County Airport, plus the Wing-Group team, all wing A. C. & W. Squadrons and the 2d Tow Target Squadron, Mitchel Air Force Base, N. Y., participated.

LOGS 1,000 KOREAN TRIPS

Completion of the 1,000th long-range weather reconnaissance mission over Korea has been announced last month by the 56th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron of the Air Weather Service.

Buzzard Kilos, as the trans-Korean weather flights are called, are flown regularly from Yokota Air Base in Japan westward across Korea, returning near the island of Formosa.

Approximately 12,000 flying hours were logged in the thousand Buzzard Kilo missions, roughly equivalent to 115 trips around the earth.

ON THE JOB...not "on the way"

WHY WASTE DAYS of this trained cameraman's time, so valuable to the military, by using slow, surface transportation to send him to a new assignment? Air travel will speed him there five times faster, and he'll arrive fresh — ready for work. Air Lines and Defense. New computations, including recently acquired new types of aircraft, show that America's scheduled airlines could move every member of the combat divisions of the U. S. Army based in the Zone of the Interior from one coast to the other in less than four days.

The estimate takes into account the movement of 229,800 officers and men in the infantry, airborne and armored divisions employing only the aircraft used in domestic service. The 512 four-engine and 727 twin-engine planes, according to the Aircraft Industries Association, could transport more than 60,000 men in one lift and thus complete the entire operation in less than 96 hours, including the time necessary to ferry the planes back to their original pick-up point.

The scheduled airline fleet, it is estimated, is equivalent to almost 35 Air Force heavy transport wings.

The significance of these estimates is apparent in light of the recent statement made at Ft. Bragg, N. C., by General Matthew B. Ridgway, Chief of Staff of the Army, that he did not believe the Air Force has enough aircraft of the desired type to lift all of the war-strength 82d Airborne Division and its equipment at one time.

In fact, the Armed Services look upon the airlines, as they do upon all forms of transportation, as a vital backlog in an emergency. A close liaison and cooperation is maintained between the civilian transportation agencies and the military forces. Two recent developments point up this close relationship. Because military jet aircraft frequently must use the same air space as do the civilian air lines, the Air Force recently arranged for the chief pilots of 12 of the lines to take a special course in the problems of jet operation. The course, of one week's duration, was given at Moody Air Force Base, Valdosta, Ga. Arrangements for the selection and attendance of the chief pilots were made through the Air Transport Association. They studied the problems of jet penetration in and out of areas and the problems of air space where jets are operating. With this knowledge they will have a better understanding, not only of the military jet aircraft now operating in many of the same areas in which their own civil aircraft operate, but also a foretaste of what they themselves must look forward to in the future era when jet transports come into general civilian use.

Also in the works is a proposal originating in the Army for an accelerated service test of helicopter operation and maintenance. The Army proposed to turn over a number of helicopters to airlines for practical tests of the many problems arising in their continued and steady operations. The results would be of great value not only to the Services but to the airlines as well, for the rotary winged craft are looked upon as offering great possibilities for short haul use, particularly from down-town to down-town routes. It is understood that the proposal gained the approval of the Department of the Army and went on to Department of Defense level where it was looked upon with so much favor that the suggestion was made that it be broadened to include Air Force and Navy participation as well as Army. It has now gone back to the three departments for further study and correlation.

All these types of cooperation and mutual consideration of problems are contributing heavily to National Defense.

Pay and "Fringe Benefits." The Department of Defense may yet be put into a position where it must make a fight for Service pay adjustment. While the administration has thus far held back support from Service pay the word has generally gone around that if Congress voted another pay increase for civilian government employees the

The Price Is Vigilance

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have read your fine editorial in the 31 July issue on the exclusion of retired military personnel from the recent legislation granting income tax deductions. From it I have come to the conclusion that the Services has no one to blame but themselves. It appears to me that officers responsible for legislative matters again have failed to exercise the vigilance expected of military officers generally. If I recall correctly this is at least the second time that "the Services had been under the impression" until the bitter facts were learned after a bill became a law.

I cannot sneak about the other Services or the Office of the Secretary of Defense, but I know that there are special duty law officers in the Navy wearing the star of the line. I am a layman in legal matters but I have always thought it was a lawyer's job to "read the fine print."

My own experience has been that failure by line or combat officers to exercise vigilance, resulting in serious detriment to the public interest, would be the occasion for inquiry. In these days when securing competent military personnel is a matter of national concern, their exclusion from the benefits of this law is a "serious detriment to the public interest."

Seeks Army Doctor

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am looking for an Army doctor, who was one of the first people at the scene of an accident I had in which my two passengers were killed. The accident occurred about 8 miles below Hopland—between the towns of Hopland and Cloverdale, Calif. on the U. S. 101 Highway. I was badly injured.

I would greatly appreciate anything you can do to help me locate that Army doctor. He administered first aid to my passengers and me.

Lo, The Poor Oil Men

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have read with interest in your 7 Aug. issue how the National Oil Jobbers Council bitterly complains that members of our Armed Forces pay less for their gasoline at Post Exchange service stations. This is a very selfish attitude on the part of the Council and there is no doubt that special oil interests are contributing thousands of dollars and much influence in depriving the military man from saving a few pennies from his present limited income. Mr. Ellis says that if a serviceman drives his car 10,000 miles a year, which is bunk in the first place, he would be able to save approximately $20.00 per year or about 40¢ per week. When will these companies realize the service these military people render to their country? And I wonder just how much this extra 40¢ per week will mean to the oil interests.

We are aware of the tremendous profits now being earned by these oil companies. There is no doubt, of course, that Mr. Ellis of the Council uses the highest figures possible. Any serviceman will tell you that it is a rarity for them to travel 10,000 miles during the year while stationed at a military installation.

The Motto of some business men must be "If the serviceman has a dollar left, we want it." It might be more patriotic to help service personnel than to try to get the last nickel out of them.

SHEPARD W. DAVIS

Wants Pay Action

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Today's paper states that the postal employs pay raise will be reconsidered next week.

What is wrong with our Service leaders? Will our Defense Sec'y. let us down? I am a retired 1st Lt. (advanced from WWI commission), 70 years of age and head of a family. All my war bonds had to be cashed in to keep up with H.C.L. To old to obtain work. When active duty personnel gets a raise, we retired at least get some crumbs that drop, which helps some. Our taxes, real estate) was doubled here two years ago, and I am about $1,000.00 in the hole, borrowing to keep my head above water.

Can not somebody stir up the Defense Dept. to come to our relief?

WORRIED

Ode to Army Wife

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

With apologies to Army's Brave Old Team, I have just mailed this bit of doggerel to my good wife who perspires out a 24-month Stateside wait for my return, in hopes that it might get a laugh out of her.

CWR

ON, BRAVE OLD ARMY WIFE

(With apologies to the Brave Old Army Team)

The Army Wife's the spice of life
To men in Olive Green.
She softens up the daily strife
In Hubby's grim routine.
And when the kids are fighting
While she wields her mop and pail,
She's always there with tousled hair,
To wallop 'em in the tail!

The Army Wife! (whistle)
Rah! Rah! Rah! Boom!!
On, Brave Old Army Wife!
While garments fray,
Eke out economy,
What else on cheerless Army pay?

Senate also voted a five per cent pay raise for 1,500,000 classified and postal employees but on objection by Majority Leader Knowland the action was rescinded and went to the bottom of the calendar. Senator Knowland said that the Administration does not object to the pay raise but took the position that Congress must at the same time make provision to finance its cost.

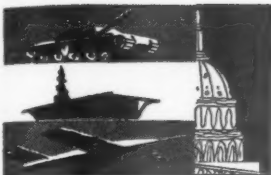

Meanwhile, no further mention has been made of Service pay. In fact, no action has yet been initiated in Congress to rescind the discriminatory tax provision barring retired Service personnel under 65 years of age from the tax concessions provided for all State, local, and Federal civilian employees in similar retirement status.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Home for a rest after 11 months of action in the Pacific is Navy Air Group 16, which has accounted for 150 Japanese planes destroyed in the air. Pilots of the fighter squadron shot down 135 aircraft, and the additional enemy planes were destroyed by the bomber and torpedo squadrons of the Air Group. The largest single day's tally came during the air battle for Saipan, which will always be known to pilots of the group as the "Mariana Turkey Shoot."

50 Years Ago—The Army uniform question seems to be giving the authorities at the War Department considerable trouble. The matter of uniform changes is becoming very serious, and already officers are complaining that they are required to purchase too much in the way of uniforms, and that to keep up with the requirements of the regulations they are kept in constant debt.

90 Years Ago—To counteract the effects of malaria on the troops in the Department of the South, during the warm months, whiskey, with quinine, in prophylactic doses, will be issued to the enlisted men, particularly those on duty in districts especially malarious or on excessive fatigue duty, at such times and in such quantities as the medical officer shall deem it necessary to keep the command in a healthy and active condition. Ordinary fatigue duty does not justify the issue of whiskey, and will be discontinued in future, except in the manner prescribed.

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

INCREASED COMPENSATION for widows of Spanish American War veterans has been proposed by Senator Martin (R-Pa) in an amendment to HR 9020. Payments would be increased from $64.50 to $69.50 for widows who were married to veterans during their service, and from $51.60 to $56.60 for those married to veterans after their service, but prior to 1937. The Senator said he feels "this is the least we can do for this group of veterans' widows."

"SKYWAYS" has been suggested as the name for the new U. S. Air Force Academy. The Government has been given a "wonderful opportunity," according to Mrs. John E. Dinan of Cohoes, N. Y., to commemorate the memory of General "Billy" Mitchell who wrote the book "Skyways." This name, she said, "would be a most appropriate name for the Academy." Inserting her suggestion in the Congressional Record, Representative O'Brien (D-NY) said he believes the suggestion "has a great deal of merit. There is a bold sweep to the name she proposes, and it would be a most fitting way to honor the memory of a great pioneer of the airways."

REPORTING ON INVESTIGATIONS which have been conducted of various military activities, Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass) said, "Without a doubt we have irritated the military." But he added, "It is fair to say that this watchdog activity has had a beneficial result and that great savings have been effected." He praised the Defense Department and its officials for their cooperation and said it has made the task of the Committee immeasurably easier.

CRITICISM LEVELED at military research and development programs by the House Committee on Government Operations included the charge that research installations sometimes are forced into a military mold by the troops which support them. It appears, the Committee said, "that there is a danger in placing the direction of research under military personnel who perform must be preoccupied with the administration of a large military support organization." The AF Cambridge Research Center was cited as an example of a research activity whose support functions have become so important that they have changed the character of administration. The Lincoln Laboratory at MIT was cited as an example "of a successful research operation unimpeded in its productivity by support problems."

MILITARY NOMINATIONS confirmed by the Senate during the first seven months of the present session of Congress total almost 23,000. They include more than 8,000 in the Army, 3,500 in the AF, more than 6,000 in the Navy and almost 5,000 in the Marine Corps.

A HIGH JUSTICE DEPARTMENT post has been recommended for Maj. Gen. Frank H. Partridge, USA-Ret., by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The group favorably reported a bill (HR 9804) which will authorize General Partridge's appointment as Assistant Commissioner of the Border Patrol, Detention and Deportation Division of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

ALSO RECOMMENDED by the Senate Judiciary Committee is a bill (HR 8034) which confers a Congressional Charter on the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War. The primary purpose of the Sons is to keep alive the memory and traditions of the Grand Army of the Republic. The Committee noted that the congressional charter granted to the GAR will expire upon the death of the last member (the sole survivor will be 108 next February) and in a sense the new charter will succeed the charter formerly granted to the GAR. The proposed incorporators include General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, USA-Ret., and Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, 3d, USA-Ret. General Grant is the present CinC of the organization.

PAYMENTS of station per diem allowances to officers and WOs permanently stationed in Alaska at Elmendorf AFB and Fort Richardson after 31 Jan, 1949 and before 13 Oct., 1950, would be validated under the terms of a bill (HR 10059) introduced by Representative Reed (R-Ill). Personnel who repaid such amounts to the Government would be refunded their money.

GEN. GRUENTHER SAYS REDS ARE OVER-RATED

General Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, believes the United States is too concerned about Russian power. Particularly as to the allegedly high percentage of their forces being actual combat men.

He has told a Senate Committee that statistics are misleading which show the Russians getting 80-odd thousand fighting men out of every 100,000 under arms.

One of the things that doesn't show up in the statistical study, he said, is the fact "if the Soviets move, they impress civilian personnel, and they impress them at the point of a gun and impress tremendous numbers of them."

For another thing, he noted, American troops have "a higher standard of living." One of the "frills" which the Soviets cut out, he said, is graves registration. "They do not have graves registration personnel. Their attitude is that a family will know that a fellow is dead if he doesn't come back three or four years later. So they just don't bother about that. They impress civilian personnel, and they work on a lesser standard."

Neither do Russian divisions "have the staying power of the Western divisions," he added.

The General said "My feeling is this, that we get too concerned about their power. I don't want to underestimate them, but they have got some problems, too. I feel that this contest is going to be won by the side with the stoutest hearts, and I prefer to believe that we have that capability."

Third Anniversary of NATO's AirSouth Sees Gains In International Air Force

Headquarters, Allied Air Forces Southern Europe, NATO's air arm guarding the Mediterranean flank, celebrated its third anniversary 4 Aug.

AirSouth Commander, Lt. Gen. Laurence C. Craigie, in a message to his air commanders said that in three years the command "has grown from a handful of inspired men and a few obsolescent aircraft to an international organization capable of considerable defensive and offensive air action in our area of responsibility."

General Craigie added, "I am confident that with your continued support and invaluable advice we will, in the months ahead, make great progress toward our common goal—an international air force, fully equipped with combat-ready aircraft, fully manned by combat-ready pilots, and backed up by trained support personnel and adequate supplies—an air force dedicated to the prevention of war but capable of immediate, effective action if war is forced upon us."

Before activation of AirSouth Headquarters in an unused hotel in Florence, Italy, there existed in the Southern European area no coordinated system of air defense among the free nations living in the shadow of threatened aggression.

Important contributions to NATO's overall air capability made by Southern Europe forces during the past three years include:

1. Four tactical air forces organized, and jet-equipped.
2. A set of Standard Operating Procedures drawn up by AirSouth and put into use by NATO and national forces.
3. Initiation of rigid training programs.
4. A series of maneuvers designed to exercise NATO forces in skills acquired through training and to measure the efficiency and results of that training.
5. Development of redeployment and cross-servicing capabilities by national air defense and NATO air units.
6. Establishment of a central point for the receipt and transmission of information from and to all parts of the command.
7. Establishment of weather stations.
8. Development of a mobile communications unit.

The achievement of these contributions to NATO was not easy.

The establishment of an international command in time of peace had never before been attempted, and the handful of personnel who came together in Florence had no precedent to guide them. They relied on their individual experience, their own intelligence, and, in difficult times, their common desire to get the job done.

The 56th Tactical Air Force was allocated to NATO by Italy less than a month after the Headquarters was activated and training programs were immediately initiated. AirSouth's training program is a continuous one, designed to weld the NATO air forces in Southern Europe into one international air force, combat-ready and effective.

Four tactical air forces, the 56th in Italy, the 28th in Greece, and the 1st and 3d in Turkey, were organized and through the MDAP program fully equipped with F-84 jet aircraft. Lt. Gen. Rainier Cupini, IAF, commands the 56th; Air Vice Marshal E. Koutsoukos, RHAf, the 28th; Maj. Gen. Tekin Ariburun, TAF, the 1st, and Maj. Gen. Seyfi Turagay, TAF, the 3d. To coordinate the activities of the Greek 28th and the Turkish 1st and 3d Tactical Air Forces, the Sixth Allied Tactical Air Force was organized in October 1953, and Maj. Gen. Robert E. L. Eaton, USAF, was placed in command.

Throughout the organization and development of tactical air power in the Mediterranean AirSouth emphasized operational training in coordinated action with ground troops and the need to acquire an ever-greater redeployment and cross-servicing capability. French, Greek, Italian, Turkish, British and American pilots have been trained to fly together in coordinated operations, to use the same air bases and the same operating procedures.

These and other Standard Operating Procedures were developed by AirSouth's international staff until they were acceptable to all signatory nations and at the same time could fulfill NATO requirements. They include detailed methods of supply, cross-servicing, communications, exchange of information and combat operations. International agreements have facilitated the exchange of weather information and air information.

A million-dollar mobile communications unit, designed by the AirSouth staff and built in Canada, is capable of operating independently in the field or in conjunction with any existing communications system and power supply in Europe.

Honor Maj. Gen. Trapnell For Indo-China Duty

A second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit was pinned on Maj. Gen. Thomas J. H. Trapnell, USA, during a recent ceremony at Fourth Armored Division headquarters, Ft. Hood, Tex.

The presentation was made to the commander of the Fourth Armored by Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, III Corps commander, in recognition of the general's service as Chief of the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in Indo-China.

Shift Senior KMAC Advisor

Col. Oliver O. Dixon was honored recently at a retreat formation held at 3d ROK Division parade grounds. Maj. Gen. Shin Eung Kyon, division commander, lauded the departing senior KMAC advisor.

Colonel Dixon will rotate to the states where he will attend the National War College before being reassigned.

Taking over as senior KMAC advisor for the division will be Lt. Col. Kenneth L. House, who has had 13 months experience in KMAC, having formerly served with the 22d ROK Division as Regimental and Division Staff Advisor.

NATO Command Change

A change of commands in NATO's southern flank was attended recently by Admiral William M. Fechteler, Commander-in-Chief of Allied Forces Southern Europe.

FAMILY MEDICAL CARE for the Services may find a valuable ally in the American Legion which meets in Washington, D. C., the end of this month. The American Medical Association, principal foe of Service Family Care, is also an opponent of much of the hospital and medical work of the Veterans Administration. The Legion looks on the AMA as conducting an "anti-veteran crusade." Says Legion Commander Arthur J. Connell, "as long as the AMA is throwing down the gauntlet, let's pick it up."

A FLYING TANK apparently is in the works at the Fairchild Aircraft and Engine Corp. General Jacob L. Devers, USA-Ret., one-time chief of the Army Field Forces and now a Fairchild official, is reported to be working on a prototype airborne tank embodying a 90mm gun. Under current agreements the Army can't have armed aircraft, but the semi-official "Combat Forces Journal," organ of the Association of the United States Army, looks upon this private effort as "a laudable one, impelled by a desire to make it possible for the Army to move readily—to have true mobility."

CAMP PENDLETON'S WEEKLY, The Scout, will keep the gold cup that goes with the 1954 Annual Journalism Award for another year. This is the second straight year the newspaper won out over competing Marine papers which were judged on the basis of "value in promoting efficiency, welfare and contentment of station personnel."

A FORMIDABLE FORCE will be under the command of General Benjamin W. Chidlaw, USAF, commander of the newly-established Continental Air Defense Command. Right now it looks like he will have not only the components of his present ADC but also more than 100 battalions of Army Anti-aircraft artillery together with its Nike guided missile installations in 30 critical areas, Navy ships and aircraft which are part of the central warning and defense system, 21 Air National Guard squadrons, and all other available Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps units "which can contribute to a more effective air defense of the United States."

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER once called the TVA an example of "creeping socialism." Now he has nominated an outstanding Army Engineer, Brig. Gen. Herbert D. Vogel, to be chairman of the TVA and the Senate Public Works Committee looked into his attitude and qualifications for the post. In answer to a question he said that he would not call TVA "creeping socialism." Neither, said General Vogel, is it "an octopus stretching its tentacles out in every direction" nor the "face of God shining down upon a benighted land." General Vogel assured the Committee he would not let politics enter into his job. The Committee now has approved his nomination.

LOOK FOR FURTHER SQUAWKS about PX gasoline service stations from the National Oil Jobbers Council. As reported in last week's Journal, the Council's Counsel beefed to the House Government Operations Committee about the PX's service to Service men. No adverse action resulted, but the oil men are girding for next year and are looking to the Senate Small Business Committee for help.

THE $100-A-MONTH additional incentive pay authorized for medical doctors, dentists, and veterinarians in the uniformed Services is being eyed by chemists and other scientists who hold Ph.D.'s. The magazine Chemical and Engineering News reports that, particularly in the Public Health Service, "the situation is so absurd that a chemist project officer receives less money than professional men working under his supervision."

PRO AND CON, say the Chemists, there are arguments on both sides of the question of preferential treatment of professionally trained people. But if doctors, dentists and veterinarians get extra pay, so should scientists who hold Ph.D. degrees. It takes just as long to make a Ph.D. as it does a doctor, dentist or veterinarian.

CONVERSION OF B-50 OR B-29 bomber wings to radically new equipment (such as the B-47) "eliminates the combat effectiveness of that wing for a period of three to six months," according to Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass.). He revealed also that it takes six to nine months more for the wing "to regain full combat readiness."

TOP LIMIT ON HOUSES to be constructed for field grade, flag and general officers under the terms of the housing bill was whittled down when the Senate passed the supplemental appropriations last week. The housing plan calls for $27,000 homes for senior Service officers and $20,250 homes for field grade officers. An amendment to the supplemental appropriations measure reduced the top limit of unit construction to $20,000.

LOWRY AIR FORCE BASE is looking forward to another period of being the "Summer White House." Congress permitting, President Eisenhower will soon leave for Summer quarters at Denver, Colo. But his workshop will be at Lowry—just as it was last year.

THE HOOVER COMMISSION on organization of the Executive Branch of the Government is sending so-called "task forces" to various military establishments to gather data for their study. One such group, on Subsistence Services, visited the U. S. Naval Station at Seattle, Wash., and was so impressed with the "relationship that exists between your command and the Army installation in your area" that they wrote a letter of commendation to Capt. J. W. Crumpacker, SC, USN, the station's CO. "Nowhere else did we observe such an excellent job of cross-servicing," said Mr. C. D. Bean, director of the task force.

THE LESSONS OF DEFEAT may bring home to the Hoover Commission the fallacy of its earlier report recommending the shifting of most Army, Navy, and Air Force hospitals and a great many of their commissioned medical personnel to a proposed civilian agency. It also recommended that civil works be taken away from the Army Corps of Engineers, thus depriving them of valuable training and the Nation of much honest and efficient work. Fortunately, Congress refused to act on either proposal.

NORTH AMERICAN HAS BUILT MORE AIRPLANES THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY IN THE WORLD

salty vets and sleek new jets

These North American airplanes help the Navy in its vigilant defense of the seas.

SNJ Trainer — Navy version of one of the most venerable and dependable of all training planes... the world famous T-6. Served with 33 Allied nations during WW II, gave effective tactical ground support in Korea.
Thousands still in active service.

AJ-1 Savage — Holder of many Navy "firsts"
... the AJ-1 Attack Bomber was the first Navy plane designed to carry the A-Bomb... and first plane of its size to land on a "flat top." Weighing in at 15 tons, unloaded, the Savage is powered by 1 jet and 2 reciprocating engines and carries a crew of 3.

AJ-2P — The photo reconnaissance version of the AJ-2... first cousin to the historic AJ-1.
Carrying no guns, but fitted with 18 cameras
... the "2P" can fly high or low, can take pictures at any time... day or night... with special photoflash equipment in its bomb bay.

FJ-2 Fury — Now operational with the Marine Corps, this Fury set new records by completing rigid carrier evaluation tests in record time. With a speed of over 650 MPH and carrying four 20 mm cannons, the FJ-2 has a range of about 1000 miles and a service ceiling of over 45,000 feet.

T-28B — Faster than many WW II fighters, this new trainer has a top speed of 343 MPH and a service ceiling of 35,500 feet. Now being supplied to both Air Force and Navy training programs, the T-28 was designed for utmost efficiency in training our new pilots
... incorporating many innovations.

FJ-3 Fury — One of the U. S. Navy's newest air superiority fighters... with speed in the high mach numbers, faster rate of climb and superior firepower. Latest in North American's FJ Series of carrier-based planes, the FJ-3 will soon be assigned to fleet duty.

Gen. Timberlake Tells of Only 21 Tac AF

been directed to activate and train 41 units, including eight fighter-bomber wings, one light bombardment wing, one tactical reconnaissance wing, and five tactical groups, and has organized 20 other types of units.

Twenty-one units have been deployed to overseas bases by the Ninth Air Force and four additional units are programmed for deployment before the end of 1954. Among those units deployed were five wings and two tactical control groups. Two more fighter-bomber wings and a pilotless bomber squadron are included in the four units to deploy this year.

The mission of the Ninth Air Force is to organize, equip, and train for combat such units, combat crews, and individuals of the Air Force as may be designated; to provide for Air Force participation in Joint Operations and Training with land, naval and/or amphibious forces; and to support such operations of the Strategic Air Command, Military Air Transport Service, and the Air Defense Command as directed.

In addition to conducting training of units to achieve a state of combat readiness and of thousands of individual airmen who were transferred overseas as replacements, the Ninth initiated projects which led to world-wide symposia on Fighter, Tactical Reconnaissance, and Light Bombardment doctrine and employment. Numerous test exercises have been conducted in conjunction with the Air Defense Command and the Air Proving Ground Command in order to evaluate equipment and plans.

Train Crews For Korea

The training of combat crews during the period of the Korean hostilities marked a successful and valued training program for the Far East Air Forces. Participation in training programs with the Northeast Air Command, the Alaskan Air Command, and the Caribbean Air Command's Exercise WILL TOUR provided excellent training for such units of the Ninth, and was of particular value in providing experience in mobility planning.

The second phase of the command's mission, participation in joint operations, and the several services which are performed by the Ninth in support of air-ground operations has required considerable time and effort in this headquarters. The Ninth has participated in a number of major joint exercises with U. S. Army units during the past four years. Exercise LONG HORN was the last large scale maneuver in which both air and ground forces were controlled by a single headquarters, but unilateral exercises have been conducted since then in which action was closely coordinated with the corresponding Army exercise. The recently completed TACAIR 54-7 was independent of the Army's Exercise FLASH BURN, but the two exercises were coordinated so as to provide maximum benefit to both services.

In order to promote a more thorough understanding of the problems of joint air-ground operations and to achieve full coordination, the Ninth, as the only tactical air force in the United States, maintains Air Liaison Officers with Army units as requested. The Joint Air-Ground Instruction Teams and the numerous firepower demonstrations which are provided when requested are designed to further understanding and cooperation in air-ground training.

Tow Targets for A-N

The Ninth Air Force has provided assistance to Army and Navy training through utilization of its tow target squadrons. The squadrons have ranged from Alaska to Puerto Rico to Greenland in their efforts to assist anti-aircraft units in their gunnery training. Another service which is unrelated to the primary mission of the command has been the cooperation, through the Tactical Air Command, with the Army Field Forces in efforts to evaluate or test new equipment where such testing required air assistance.

Each summer the National Guard and Organized Reserves training programs have required firepower demonstrations and Joint Air-Ground Instruction Teams to keep them informed on the principles of air-ground operation. In addition, units of the Ninth have been assigned to supervise and assist in the summer training of Air National Guard units with highly satisfactory results.

The location of bases on which Ninth's units are located and the nature of the equipment and mission of a tactical air force has enabled the command to play an active role in support of the Air Defense Command. Numerous exercises and tests with the Defense Command in which subordinate units of the Ninth were integrated within the defense organization have provided excellent training for those units and have strengthened the defense mission.

Four Basic Components

The Ninth Air Force is composed of four basic components according to function. The Control System includes the headquarters and the communications group which links the commander to his subordinate units. The Directing System includes the tactical control groups and aircraft control and warning squadrons which direct and control aircraft in flight. The reconnaissance wings and groups provide the Intelligence System for the air force. Finally, the Delivery System, the fighter-bomber, fighter-day, and light bombardment units provide the striking force of a tactical air force.

This past year, the Ninth has received additional force for the Delivery System in the form of pilotless bomber squadrons. One guided missile unit will deploy overseas in the near future and another is programmed for activation to replace it.

The present goal of the Ninth is to achieve world-wide mobility for tactical units. A recent test, Exercise BOX KITE, was designed to evaluate mobility planning for tactical deployment of a fighter-bomber wing. The requirements to achieve the goal of tactical mobility for all types of tactical units are under continuous study at the headquarters. The results of BOX KITE were successful in evaluating the minimum requirements of supplies and personnel necessary to move a wing to a forward base in a distant theater under tactical conditions. Expansion of the tests to include other types of wings and constant study of the mobility requirements will achieve the goal of world-wide mobility.

Close-up of new high visibility canopy of the Air Force-Martin B-57B light bomber, now in production at the Martin Company. It differs from earlier B-57 models in its arrangement of the cockpit and in a longer canopy. The larger bubble gives the second crewman visibility in all directions. Ejection-type seating for the pilot, and navigator-radar operator-bombardier is a tandem arrangement, with the second crewman behind and slightly higher. Shown under the wing are two napalm tanks and four 5-inch high-velocity rockets. The same load rides under the opposite wing.

Speed Brakes, New Canopy And Cockpit Mark B-57B

A redesigned version of the Martin B-57 light bomber has been announced by the U. S. Air Force and the aircraft company.

The B-57B, latest model of the Canberra bomber, has a completely redesigned cockpit and canopy, has been fitted with speed brakes on both sides of the fuselage, and has been revealed as a heavily-armed aircraft.

The joint Air Force-Martin announcement said the primary advantage of the new cockpit is greatly improved visibility for the craft's two crewmen. Seating is a tandem arrangement. The second crewman sits directly behind the pilot at a higher level. The second crewman, a navigator-radar operator-bombardier, can thus better aid the pilot in searching out targets.

The windshield has been improved to include anti-icing, bullet-proofing, and elimination of fogging.

The speed brakes added to the aft portion of the fuselage are roughly triangular in shape. They open outward from the rear on both sides by hydraulic action. In full operation they move in coordination with finger-type brakes located on each wing panel, outboard of the engine nacelles. The finger-brakes project vertically when extended through the upper and lower surfaces of the wing panels.

The new fuselage speed brakes permit dives at steeper angles, give more speed control during operations close to the ground, and afford the pilot better control during landing approaches.

Four napalm tanks may be transported by the B-57B on under-wing pylons in addition to a total of eight 5-inch HVAR rockets, four on each side. Completely different explosives could be substituted, depending on the mission and the target. In addition, the Martin B-57B mounts eight 50-caliber machine guns, firing out of the forward wing edges.

The Martin-developed rotary bomb-door forms part of the actual fuselage bottom of the B-57B.

The bomb-door is removable. When out of the airplane, it is mounted on wheels, and when loaded, is rolled into position under the fuselage, then hoisted into position by standard bomb hoists. Since replacement of an empty door with a loaded one is accomplished in a short time, availability of B-57Bs for actual flight operations is increased.

AMF Buys Sight-Light

The Sight-Light Corporation of Deep River, Conn., which was the first electrical plant to receive the Army-Navy "E" Award during WW II, has been purchased by the American Machine & Foundry Company.

Sight-Light, which develops and produces electrical systems and ordnance devices for the Navy, was acquired for 10,750 shares of AMF common stock. Management of the company will remain unchanged.

For its work during WW II, Sight-Light received four renewals of its "E" Award, and a number of commendations from the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance. In 1946, the company received the Bureau of Ordnance's development award for its work on fire control gun captain panels for heavy cruisers of the Des Moines class.

CONVAIR'S FINAL B-36

Almost seven years to a day since the first B-36 intercontinental bomber was delivered to the Air Force, Convair Aircraft Corporation will, on 14 Aug., roll the last B-36 out of its Fort Worth, Tex., plant for delivery to the Strategic Air Command.

In a brief ceremony at the factory's flight line, a 15-man crew from SAC's 92d Heavy Bomb Wing will climb into the last B-36 and fly the huge aircraft to its new home at Fairchild AFB, Wash.

Convair is modifying an undisclosed number of B-36 bombers into carriers for F-84 fighters. The "parasite" fighter can be released and retrieved by the "mother" B-36 while in flight.

Douglas B-66 Gets New GE Auto Control System

The Air Force's new twin-jet bomber, the Douglas B-66, is being equipped with an automatic electrical and control system which eliminates at least ten pilot functions and requires no manual switching, according to an announcement by the General Electric Company.

E. G. Haven, manager of Aviation Sales for the company, said the new Air Force bomber is the first production aircraft to be equipped with the new fully automatic system which is said to sharply reduce the time required by the pilot to get in the air once he climbs into the cockpit.

Lockheed Plans $10-Million "Nuclear Age" Missile System Lab, Says Gen. Quesada

Lockheed Aircraft Corporation has announced that it has appropriated a fund of $10,000,000 to finance establishment of a new scientific laboratory for advanced research by its Missile Systems Division.

A cadre of eminent scientists, many of whom are nuclear physicists, is already on the job preparing for the "nuclear age" laboratory at the Missile Systems Division's plants at Van Nuys, Calif., and more will be appointed to the staff in weeks ahead, it was announced by Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, USAF-Ret., vice president and general manager.

The aim of Lockheed's new scientific team will be to explore new scientific fields wherein lie the weapons of tomorrow, General Quesada said. "The end objective of their research will be reliable, producible missile systems," he added.

Research in the nuclear field will receive heavy emphasis in Lockheed's new laboratories, according to General Quesada, who commanded the Atomic Energy Commission's first thermonuclear tests at Eniwetok in 1951.

"Potentials of the atom need to be exploited in a missile system affording unlimited and reliable tactical employment," he said. "Today's nuclear weapons have far outstripped the means of delivering them on target."

Heading the research laboratory will be Dr. E. H. Krause, nuclear physicist, who resigned as associate director of research at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington to join Lockheed.

Dr. Krause directed the nuclear weapons research program conducted jointly by the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico and the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D. C. He was in charge of extensive scientific experimentation, including extremely complex instrumentation, on the atomic test program conducted at Eniwetok during operations Sandstone, Greenhouse and Ivy.

Dr. Krause will be joined in the research laboratory by Dr. Montgomery H. Johnson, named associate director, who has served on the Radiation Laboratory staff of the University of California since 1952, working on nuclear weapons research. He also served at the Naval Research Laboratory.

Another scientist joining with Dr. Krause is Dr. Eric Durand, who came to Van Nuys from Chicago Midway Laboratories.

The staff will include Edward J. Zadina, who resigned as technical adviser and operations analyst with the Air Force Special Weapons Center, Kirtland AFB, N. M., and Henry R. Senf, who before joining Lockheed was acting director of development, Air Navigation Development Board, Civil Aeronautics Administration.

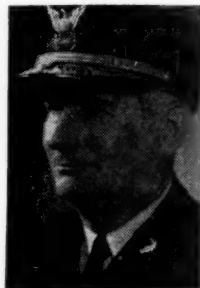

Final plans for the new laboratory are taking shape, General Quesada said, and work will go ahead immediately.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

RADM. Kenneth K. Cowart, USCG, has been sworn in for his second term as Engineer-in-Chief of the U. S. Coast Guard.

A 1926 Graduate of the CG Academy, Admiral Cowart took a post graduate course in engineering at the U. S. Naval Academy in 1932 and in 1933 was graduated from the University of California with the degree of Master of Science.

RADM. K. K. Cowart

In December 1942 he was assigned to the cutter Campbell as Engineer Officer. While he was serving in that capacity, the Campbell, which was on escort duty in the Atlantic, caught an enemy submarine on the surface and ramed it, finally sinking it with gunfire. Several members of the sub's crew were taken prisoner. Admiral Cowart received the Silver Star "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity—during and following the sinking of" the enemy submarine. The ship also engaged five other U-boats during the 24 hours prior to ramming the sub.

He was named Commanding Officer of the Campbell in May 1943.

After various ship and shore posts, he was appointed to his first term as Engineer-in-Chief at Coast Guard Headquarters, with the rank of Rear Admiral, on 1 August 1950.

New Cadet Commandant

Capt. Leon H. Morine, USCG, has assumed duties of Commandant of Cadets, U. S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., from which he graduated in 1928. He had been Chief of Public Information at CG Headquarters.

Leaves VOA Ship

Capt. Oscar C. B. Wev, USCG, has reported to Eighth Coast Guard District Headquarters, New Orleans, La., as Chief of the Law Enforcement and Intelligence Section.

Relieved by Cdr. Harry Davis, USCG, he was the first Commanding Officer of the cutter Courier which is operating in the Mediterranean Sea as a floating transmitter for the Voice of America. The ship beams VOA programs to the Middle East and to Iron Curtain countries around the Mediterranean.

Appointments

President Eisenhower has appointed the following Coast Guard officers to the grades indicated for temporary service with dates of rank as follows:

ARDC Automatic Escape Device Blasts Pilots Out Bottom Of Jet Bombers

Four Air Force volunteers have been successfully ejected downward from a high-speed bomber in emergency escape tests, states the Air Research and Development Command.

The men were catapulted downward through a hatch in the bottom of a B-47 at speeds of more than 500 miles per hour and parachuted safely into the Gulf of Mexico, using completely automatic equipment. The ejections were conducted by ARDC's Wright Air Development Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio (WADC), as a part of a continuing emergency escape program.

The four WADC volunteers were Col. A. M. Henderson, Capt. Edward G. Sperry and 1st Lt. Henry P. Nielsen, of the Aero Medical Laboratory, and M/Sgt. George A. Post, of the Equipment Laboratory. The four jumpers completed seven ejections at aircraft speeds of 250 to more than 500 miles per hour and from an altitude of 10,000 feet.

The new method of emergency escape from high-speed aircraft utilizes an ejection seat which is exploded downward and out of the aircraft. The seat is mounted on rails and is driven downward by the explosion of a powder cartridge. The system is fully automatic. After the jumper pulls a ring to fire the seat out of the aircraft, he is released from the seat and his parachute opened by special explosive and timing devices.

In addition to proving the feasibility of the downward ejection system for aircraft escape, the WADC team also tested and evaluated several other items of experimental and standard equipment. Included were jump and water tests of a Navy exposure suit which is used by both services, and an investigation of the ability of a pilot to wear an inflated USAF high altitude suit while parachuting. The downward ejection escapes were made by the WADC crew at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, to permit the jumpers to land in water.

Project engineer for all phases of the test program is Kenneth F. Hecht, assisted by E. Frank Jones, both of WADC's Aircraft Laboratory. 1st Lt. Ira M. Barash, of the Aero Medical Laboratory, was medical officer for the project, and F. J. Beaupre, Equipment Laboratory, was in charge of the parachute equipment used by the jumpers. A WADC B-47 aircraft, modified to handle the special ejection and recording equipment used in the tests, was flown by Capt. William T. Campbell, Jr., and Capt. Ralph W. Lusk, of the Directorate of Flight and All-Weather Testing, WADC.

"FROGMEN" ATTRITION LEAPS

About 50 per cent of the officers and enlisted men enrolled in the Navy's 13th "Frogmen" Training Course (16 Aug.-23 Nov.) are expected to wash out.

The Underwater Demolition Team Training Course conducted at the U. S. Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va., is often referred to as one of the toughest involving physical stamina now being conducted by the Armed Forces.

Some of the activities included in the course are a three-hour "forced march" in which trainees jog up and down Little Creek beaches and sand dunes for 12 to 15 miles, gas chamber drills, the Combat Infantryman's Infiltration Course, relay races in which trainees carry heavy rubber boats, and a 24,000-yard course over all types of terrain while carrying (seven men to a team) a 350-pound inflatable boat.

Among them, he has held the posts of Senior Advisor, MP, in Nanking, China, from 1946 to 1948; Assistant Commandant, Provost Marshal General Center; and Provost Marshal, Office of the Chief, Army Field Forces, Fort Monroe, Va.

At the same time, Maj. Gen. William H. Maglin, USA, Provost Marshal General, announced that Col. William M. Campbell, USA, Chief of Personnel Division, will leave for Europe to fill the post vacated by Colonel Hobson.

Scholarships Awarded By Armed Forces Group

Scholarship Grants for 1954 of $500 each were awarded 3 Aug. by the Armed Forces Relief and Benefit Association, 936 Warner Building, Washington 4, D. C., to Miss Phyllis Mary Bartlett, daughter of Lt. Col. Frank E. Bartlett, USA, and Mr. Jerry Everett Phillips, son of Maj. John L. Phillips, USA.

The Association awards these self-aid scholarship grants each year to worthy sons and daughters of members who are selected by a committee appointed by the President of the Association.

The membership of the Scholarship Selection Committee which made the selections for 1954 was composed of RAdm. Otis L. Anderson, USPHS, Chairman; Col. Albert J. Keller, USMC; Capt. Joseph B. Feder, USCG; Col. George C. Duehring, USA; Col. Perry B. Griffith, USAF; Capt. William B. Moore, USN, and Col. Elmer Brown, USA, members.

The Association is a non-profit service organization of officers who are stationed on active duty. General Edwin W. Rawlings, USAF, is President. Through its membership the association provides inexpensive group life insurance and other benefits to its members.

Rhythm-Thrust Technique of Night Firing Developed by Research Unit

Psychologists at Ft. Benning's Human Research Unit No. 3, are studying human reactions under night conditions, have used an old adage in developing new methods of training men to fire accurately in night assault.

The problem was to eliminate rifle bounce due to normal body movements while walking toward an assault.

Working on the assumption that an old dog cannot learn new tricks but that he can be taught to use the ones he knows the researchers decided to take advantage of old habits possessed by almost all the men.

The technique they developed and are now testing requires the advancing man to thrust or point the weapon forward on each step, firing as he does so.

"It worked even better than we had expected," said Dr. Edgar L. Shivers, leader of project MOONLIGHT. "Apparently the man has a whole life time of habits, based on throwing baseballs, footballs and the like, which enable him to master rapidly the technique of 'throwing' the rifle at the target," he added.

Men trained in the new technique were compared with men instructed in the standard procedure by having both groups fire on a realistic night assault proficiency range.

The rhythm-thrust technique resulted in two to three times as many hits as the standard method.

Work on the squad assault is the fourth phase of Moonlight. In the first phase, researchers found the exact distances at which targets could be detected under various degrees of light, from dark starlight to bright moonlight. They discovered that the average person on a typical night can see little more than 50 yards.

Other phases resulted in a new method of firing the M-1 rifle at night, and were the basis of a training technique described in a Department of the Army training circular.

The method bypasses the use of sights, which are virtually invisible at night, in favor of a pointing technique in which the man keeps his head high and both eyes open.

Students are shown their errors with the pointing technique, and soon learn the proper correction through daylight firing. Later use of the correction enables them to get up to 210 per cent more hits at night.

The Human Research Unit also is currently engaged in other tasks concerning daylight marksmanship, night patrols and aspects of airborne training. Established under Army Field Forces, it is supervised by the Human Resources Research Office of George Washington University.

Director of the unit is Dr. Francis E. Jones. 1st Lt. Charles K. Ramond is acting military chief.

USMC Participates In Fort Henry Meet

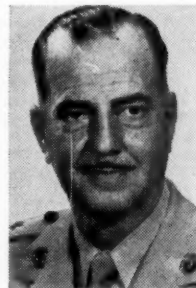

Brig. Gen. Samuel K. Bird, USMC, Head, Disbursing Branch, Supply Department, Marine Headquarters, will command Marines selected to represent the United States at ceremonies at Ft. Henry on 18 August.

The celebration, commemorating the 14th anniversary of the signing of the Ogdenburg Agreement, the mutual defense pact between the United States and Canada, will be witnessed by representatives of both governments.

General Bird will represent General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., USMC, Commandant of the Marine Corps.

The ceremony will be highlighted by an aerial display of Royal Canadian Air Force jets and musical selections by the Royal Canadian Signal Military Band and the Marine Corps Drum and Bugle Corps.

There will also be precision drilling by the Marine Drill Team and a demonstration of British Army drill and battle tactics by the Fort Henry Guard.

Brig. Gen. Bird

JAGC Promotion Bill Goes To White House

Better promotion opportunities for Judge Advocate General Corps officers of the Army were assured this week with Senate passage of the JAGC Bill.

The measure, which provides for integration of the JAGC promotion list with that of the Army, now goes to the White House.

When enacted, the bill will authorize the Army to restore the seniority and grade which JAGC officers have lost due to the separate promotion lists.

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens said, when he requested the legislation last Spring, that JAGC officers had "been penalized" by the establishment of a separate list. Their plight will be alleviated, he noted, when they are restored to the Army promotion list "in the positions they would have attained if they had been on the Army list."

The separate promotion list for JAGC officers was established in 1948 under the terms of the Universal Military Training Act, to serve as a safeguard against the effect of "command influence" upon the proper discharge of legal duties by Judge Advocates of the Army.

Mr. Stevens said, "Experience in the Navy and Air Force, which have no separate promotion lists for their law specialists and Judge Advocates, indicates that the establishment of a separate promotion list has, in practice, little bearing upon the problem of 'command influence.'"

USAF Convenes Board To Select Majors

An Air Force selection board to pick permanent captains for promotion to the rank of major will be convened about 7 Sept.

The promotion list and the zones of consideration are as follows.

Air Force—All officers through Stalzer, Eugene A., 11347A (No. 409).

Medical—All officers through Marshall, Charles B., Jr., 19962A (No. 12).

Dental—All officers through Jones, Thomas K., 19744A (No. 8).

Veterinary—All officers through Kuhn, Ulysses S. G., 3d, 19012A (No. 3).

Medical Service—All officers through Powell, Dudley F., 19507A (No. 15).

Chaplain—All officers through Hammon, Wilson C., 18805A (No. 7).

References are to the 1954 Air Force Register.

Names of permanent grade captains of the Nurse Promotion List will extend through Dyer, Eleanor K., 21102W (No. 176).

The Air Force said that failure of a Nurse to be selected will not be construed as a deferment within the meaning of Section 509 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

Due to the lack of eligibles, the Air Force explained, no Women Medical Service officers will be named for permanent promotion to the rank of major during this calendar year.

Any officer who desires to submit a written communication under provisions of Section 507 (c) of the Officer Personnel Act, should immediately forward the information directly to the Director of Military Personnel, Headquarters, USAF, Washington, D. C., the Air Force said. Such messages should be written to the attention of Prom. and Sep. Div., and should be at Headquarters before 1 September.
